COMMUNIQUÉ # 1123 TUESDAY 23rd MAY

UNITY! FREEDOM! SOCIALISM! - ONE CIVIL SERVICE UNION, ONE GLORIOUS DESTINY!

THE SECRET POLICEMAN'S OTHER BALL

ROUND & ABOUT

By Judas Iscariot

Deputy leader CHRIS BAUGH is rightly up in arms at revelations over the role of the secret police in preventing a top TROT from taking up the general secretaryship - despite winning the standard ballot in 1987.

Secret government files released earlier this year, under the 30-year rule, show that Margaret Thatcher's government directly meddled in the internal affairs of civil servants' union CPSA^{PBUT}, the predecessor of the glorious Public and Commercial Services (PCS) union we know and love today.

The government was concerned about the growing influence of the forerunner of the Socialist Party, MILITANT and, in particular, Militant supporter, the late JOHN MACREADIE, who died in 2010 (see PFL obit online).

MACREADIE defeated JOHN ELLIS in the general secretary election in CPSA in 1987. One contemporaneous official memo has been reported as stating "Subversives ... cannot be tolerated in such jobs". Their back-channel to the MODERATE establishment was activated and, in one of the most blatant stitch-ups we've ever ignored, the union's right wing had him undemocratically removed by claiming irregularities in the poll and forcing a rerun (after a High Court victory) which ELLIS duly won. You can't make this shit up.

Yesterday's SOCIALIST PARTY hand-out carries a rant by BOFF that goes into more detail about the right-wing MODR8 collaboration with MI5 to defeat the left in those days but they left out three little gems (though they appear on their, inferior, website). The first is that the late JOHN ELLIS, the Moderati candidate, was so confident of winning (despite what had obviously been a very close run thing only months earlier) that he felt able to abandon campaigning for over a week to pounce off to Israel for a holiday in the sun. The second is the fact that two branches run by the Broad Left (the MENDICANT dominated left who backed MACREADIE) jumped the gun to claim that ELLIS had rigged the ballot to challenge the election before the results were even declared. And the third is that there is no mention of the class treachery of BL84 (a CPSA front led by Commissars and Labour hacks) in supporting the call for a rerun. Perhaps the grandees don't want to re-open old quarrels with the surviving BL84 and Commissar old-timers who now are their allies in the PCS DEMOCRATS. But then why would they leave it on their website? Incompetence or contempt?

You might have a vague memory of long standing PFL supporter, JANE AITCHISON, the former DWP President who was kicked out of the SOCIALIST PARTY because the grandees objected to her sending her brat to a private school instead of the Politically Correct bog-standard comprehensive down the road in conformity with their MARXIST DOGMA. Well good news. She is making another bid to return to the national union stage. JANE, together with her partner, ROB WILLIAMS, have been seeking to expand their LEEDS power-bases with the support of the INDEPENDENT LEFT. LEEDS branch which was solidly LU is now under the control of TROTSKY'S INDEPENDENT TRADERS. Both JANE and ROB have conveniently ensured that they remain in branches not related to their own personal workplaces in order to broaden their control over LEEDS HQ and LEEDS branches. Mde AITCHISON has form: She's tried to kick her way back to the top before, obviously without success (PFL passim).

The old codgers in our two pensioners' organisations (CSPA and ARMS) are not very happy at the changes at Falconcrest this year. Though they still have the run of the meeting rooms at our Clapham Junction HQ and free tea or coffee, they now have to go further afield for anything more substantial, following the closure of the canteen to permit the redevelopment of the 4th floor for letting. Most go down to PIGGIES, a the well-known café further down the Falcon Road, while those still able to stand up unassisted sometimes go to GREGGS, which is a bit nearer on the other side. The refurbishment has already enabled PCS to let office space to the prison officers union (POA) whose 27,000 strong sub-paying membership make it a juicy target for a take-over in the not too distant future.

Some of us will be fighting for seats in Auditorium 2 at close of conference this afternoon to see I, Daniel Blake, the critically acclaimed movie by the award winning radical director, KEN LOACH that won the Palme d'Or at the 2016 Cannes Film Festival and the Prix du public at the 2016 Locarno International Film Festival. As we learned on Friday's Newsquiz, JEREMY CORBYN has seen the film 3 times and didn't even need the subtitles on the third. What JEREMY may not know is that KEVIN McHUGH had visions of Stardom, as he almost appeared in the movie - as himself. The hunt was on for old-git GEORDIE extras when filming began in NEWCASTLE during October 2015. KEVIN's fevered imagination conjured up images of shagging ANNA FRIEL while holding an OSCAR in one hand and a BAFTA in the other. All of which evaporated when he failed even to get an audition.

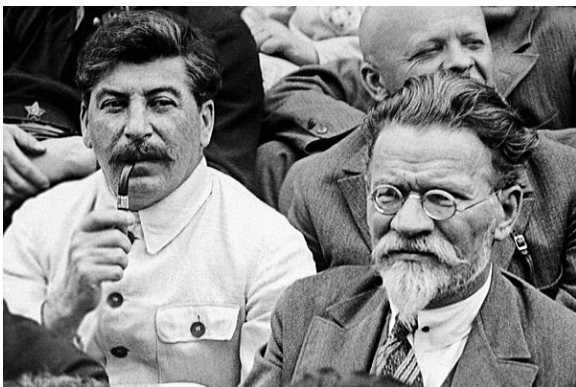

While gathering intel from an agent in the Centre bar yesterday afternoon COLONEL ISLAM discovered he had forgotten his pen. Luckily there are dozens of freebies on offer downstairs, so ISLAM gratefully took one from the LIGHTHOUSE FINANCIAL ADVICE stall which did the job for at least another 30 minutes. That evening the poxy pen fell to bits during the debriefing at the OLD SHIP HOTEL. Boycott the Bastards.

Finally, hats off to BBC RADIO LEEDS, and another example of our global influence, when they presented a classic in the “Favourite Tunes of Famous People” format. Last Sunday, Nathan Turvey, in probably his last stand-in for Leeds' regular Sunday presenter, asked his audience to “guess the famous person in the news” from the clues provided by the titles in the songs he proceeded to play: Mott The Hoople's All The Young Dudes was first, then The Brady Bunch theme song, followed by The Smiths' Suffer Little Children. As the recently released ROLF HARRIS might put it: “Can ya tell whadditis yit” Later, announcing the winner, NATHAN played the selection again and said: "I think most of you worked out the answer was IAN BRADY, which is someone we're talking about this morning of course, who died earlier in the week" Predictably, the humour-challenged politically correct brigade soon pounced on him with a torrent of complaints about so-called bad taste, forcing the BBC to take it off i-Player and issue a grovelling apology. We thought it was a nice touch that his final clue-song was actually written in memory of the 5 Moors Murder victims.

ALL TRITE

A1 - Support

The NEC – did you know they were elected by the members? - they’ve written this beautiful Motion. Really great. It sets a really good role model for the conference to lead with. They really do all those things like campaigning for job - they don’t tell you this in the fake news media - but they’re doing it all the time. I’ve seen it folks.

A2 Oppose

Seems petty to protest at such an amazing saving. That’s what we do. If we get the chance – it will happen and just 14 members. The savings we will make those jobs for everyone. Good deal.

That Alpha Pension Scheme? That’s the way to do it. Really special. Beautiful cakes.

A16 Oppose

Stick with the Alpha. That’s where the money’s gonna be made. Trust me. I’ve met their chairman. Great guy.

A17 Oppose

Where to draw the line. Homosocials can’t get pregnant you know. Check out history on this. Not on my watch.

PFLCPSA NEWS

Big hugs to any comrades from Manchester who might have friends and loved ones caught up in last night’s attack on the Manchester Arena. Solidarity siblings.

All fired up and ready for the big boys and girls this afternoon? Please contain your excitement. Tissues are available from reception. Today’s apology is to those trying to get hold of us by mobile phone once we’ve retreated to the bunker. We’ve been forced to rent a Safe House in the 20th century and the cellphone network hasn’t reached it yet. On the plus side, after hacking the house router, our broadband connection is fine and dandy, so emails to dropbox@pflcpsa.com still get through. Perfect for anonymous tittle or late emerging tattle.

Routine intelligence briefings take place throughout the hours of business in and around the venue. Just catch a fallen Imam. Dip into your pocket. Never let em get away. Catch a fallen Imam, dip into your pocket. Tell him what you want to say. Preferably in double spaced 12 point font on an otherwise clean A4 sheet. Or the back of a fag packet, whichever comes first.

T-Shirts mysteriously refuse to appear but if you all shout “Tinkerbell” and wave negotiable pictures of Charles Darwin in the air, I’m sure it’ll make absolutely no fuckin difference whatsoever. Be fun to watch though.

Other exclusive merchandise remains embarrassingly available at the market stall. Do you really want to be the only one in your street without a 2014 First Farewell Tour cuddly vest? So what are you waiting for?

If all else fails, remember to feed Harry the Hat. He thrives on all that heavy metal digging holes in your pocketses and gets quite aroused by the folding crinkly stuff, especially that slippery sexy new plastic lucre. Slide me sideways...
